

Clearly Rezurex has risen from the grave and awoken the dead. A refreshing style of musical mayhem that stands alone in the current music scene, Rezurex brings back the roots of early 1950's rock n' roll and combines them with influences of the 1980's that have long since been forgotten by mainstream music. Rezurex hails from Los Angeles, California, and is influenced by numerous bands and artists including the Stray Cats, The Damned, Billy Idol, The Misfits, Elvis Presley, and The Cramps. They have attracted numerous fans with their haunting lyrics and adventurous spirit.

In 2006, Rezurex released their debut album, "Beyond the Grave" on Fiend Force Records (Germany) and quickly caught the attention of Psychobillies, Punks, Goths, Metal heads, and anyone that truly loves catchy sing-along music. In 2008, Rezurex released their second album "Psycho Radio." The 13 songs found on Psycho Radio include the heartbreaking "Tonight", a melodic punk psycho anthem entitled "Psycho Radio" and "Vampira Calling", a tribute song to the late, great, 1950's television undead hostess, Vampira who passed away in January 2008.

In addition, vocalist Daniel deLeon, who has already been recognized for his previous bands, has begun an acting career in television and independent films. This world-touring band keeps busy entertaining audiences with their theatrics and energetic performances year round. Not a show to miss, Rezurex has converted many with their unique sound and stage presence.
